AI VA Lab, Drop 01: The Client Results Report

A monthly workflow that shows clients what your work saved them, so they keep paying for it, plus 10 prompts for the month

DENISE CULLOM

Why this drop comes first

Clients rarely cancel a VA because the work is bad. They cancel because they can't see it. When things run smoothly, nothing seems to happen, and by month four the invoice is the only reminder that you exist.

The fix is a short monthly report that turns your invisible work into hours and dollars. It takes about 20 minutes a client once it's set up, and it does three jobs at once: it keeps the client, it makes raising your rate an easy conversation, and it hands you the next project to sell.

This drop gives you the whole workflow: what to track, an AI project that writes the report, a scheduled reminder so you never forget, and the conversation to have when the numbers are good. It works for any VA, whether or not you've installed AI agents for the client.

What's in this drop

1. The tracking sheet: five columns, filled in as you work.
2. The Results Report Agent: a project that turns your notes into a one-page report.
3. A scheduled reminder that collects the month's notes for you.
4. The rate conversation: what to say when the report shows you're underpriced.
5. Ten prompts for the month for common VA jobs.

Step 1: Track as you go

You can't report what you didn't write down. Keep one sheet per client (Google Sheets or Excel) with these five columns. Add a row whenever you finish something worth mentioning. It takes ten seconds.

Date	What I did	Time it would have taken them	Result	Category
Nov 4	Sorted inbox, drafted 34 replies	2.5 hrs	Inbox at zero by 9am	Inbox
Nov 6	Rebooked 3 clashing meetings	30 min	No missed calls	Calendar
Nov 12	Chased 4 overdue invoices	1 hr	$3,200 paid	Money

"Time it would have taken them" is the column that matters. Ask the client once how long these jobs used to take them, and use their answer. Owners nearly always underestimate their own time, so their figure is a conservative one.

"Result" is what the client cares about: money in, problems avoided, deadlines met. Write it in their words.

Step 2: Build the Results Report Agent

Create one project in your own Claude or ChatGPT account called "Client Results Reports." You'll use it for every client.

Instructions: Results Report Agent

You write monthly results reports for my VA clients. I'm [your name], a virtual assistant who [one line on what you do].

When I paste a client's monthly tracking sheet and tell you their hourly rate, write a one-page report with:

1. Headline: one sentence with the total hours handled and what that time is worth at their rate.
2. What got done: grouped by category, 2 to 4 bullets each, results first.
3. Wins: the two or three results that matter most to the business (money in, problems avoided).
4. What I improved: any process I set up or fixed this month.
5. Next month: one recommendation, with an estimate of the time or money it would save.

Warm, plain, confident, no jargon. Under 300 words. Use only the numbers I give you; never round up or invent results. If something looks off (like a total that doesn't add up), tell me before writing.

Upload a short file with each client's name, business, hourly rate (what their own time is worth, from your first conversation) and anything they care about most.

To use it: at the start of each month, paste last month's rows: "Report for [client], rate $[amount]."

Step 3: Put the reminder on a schedule

The report only works if it goes out every month. Let AI remind you and do the gathering.

> Scheduled task: Monthly report prep · Monthly, 1st, 8:10am
> Job: Get my client reports ready. Read: the tracking sheets in my [Drive folder name] folder. Steps: (1) For each client sheet, pull last month's rows. (2) Total the hours by category. (3) List any client with fewer than five rows, since I probably forgot to track. Deliver: one block per client with their rows and totals, ready for me to paste into the Results Report project. Never email a client or change a sheet.

In ChatGPT, a scheduled task may not see your project files, so connect Google Drive or OneDrive and name the folder in the prompt, as above.

Step 4: Send it, then use it

Send the report as the body of an email, not an attachment. Subject line: "[Month] at a glance: [X] hours handled." Clients read the subject line even when they don't open the email.

Then use the numbers:

- When the client replies "this is great": ask for a testimonial while they're thinking it. "I'm glad! Would you mind if I used a line or two from your reply on my website?"
- When the report shows a new problem: that's next month's project. The "Next month" section is a pitch the client has already agreed is worth solving.
- When the numbers say you're underpriced: see Step 5.

Step 5: The rate conversation

If you're saving a client 20 hours a month and their time is worth $100 an hour, your work is worth $2,000 a month to them. If you charge $800, you have room. After three reports in a row, you have the evidence.

Script: Raising your rate

Hi [first name],

Over the last three months I've handled about [hours] hours a month for you, including [one or two results from the reports]. I've loved the work and I'd like to keep growing it.

Starting [date, at least 30 days out], my rate for this work will be $[new rate] a month. That includes everything I do now plus [one new thing, e.g., the monthly report and a quarterly review of your systems].

If you'd like to talk it through, I'm happy to jump on a quick call.

[Your name]

Give 30 days' notice, tie the increase to results they've already seen, and add one small thing. Most clients say yes, because the report already did the persuading.

Ten prompts for this month

Copy, fill in the brackets and use them for client work this month.

Prompt 1: Weekly priorities from a messy brain dump

Here's everything [client] mentioned needing this week: [paste]. Sort it into Must do, Should do and Can wait, with a one-line reason each. Flag anything with a deadline or money attached.

Prompt 2: SOP from a screen recording

Here's a transcript of me doing [task] for [client]: [paste]. Write a step-by-step SOP someone else could follow, with the tools used at each step and the mistakes to avoid.

Prompt 3: Polite no to scope creep

[Client] asked me to [new task], which isn't in our agreement. Write a friendly reply under 100 words that offers to do it as an add-on for $[price] or swap it for [existing task].

Prompt 4: Client onboarding questions

I'm starting with a new client who runs [business]. Write the 12 questions I should ask in week one to understand their tools, priorities, preferences and things I should never do.

Prompt 5: Meeting agenda

Write a 30-minute agenda for [client]'s meeting with [who] about [topic]. Include the decision we need, the time per item and two questions to send attendees beforehand.

Prompt 6: Vendor comparison

[Client] needs [type of tool or service]. Compare [options] on price, key features, ease of use and contract terms in a table, then recommend one for a business of [size] and say why. Tell me which details I should double-check on each vendor's site.

Prompt 7: Tidy a spreadsheet

Here's a messy export: [paste or upload]. Clean it up: consistent names and dates, duplicates flagged (not deleted), and a summary of what you changed.

Prompt 8: Travel plan

Plan [client]'s trip to [city] on [dates] for [purpose]. Preferences: [airline, hotel, budget]. Give me a day-by-day plan and a checklist of what to book, in order. Don't book anything.

Prompt 9: Turn a long email thread into a decision

Here's a long email thread: [paste]. Summarize where things stand in five lines, list the open decisions and who needs to make each one, and draft a short email to move it forward.

Prompt 10: Find your next service to sell

Here are my notes on everything I did for [client] this month: [paste]. Which tasks repeat, follow a pattern and could become an AI agent or a fixed-price package? Rank the top three by time saved and suggest a monthly price for each.

Coming next month

Drop 02 arrives at the start of next month on your members page at virtualexpert.net/lab, and you'll get an email when it's ready. Until then, set up the tracking sheet for every client today, so your first report has a full month of rows behind it.
